Lecture at Readington Museums

“The Dutch Architectural Influence at the Bouman-Stickney Farmstead”, Christopher Pickell

In 1741 Dutch homesteader Thomas Bouman erected the building now known as the Bouman-Stickney Farmstead. But just how typical is the building of Dutch architectural design? Find out on Friday, August 24, from architecture historian Christopher Pickell, who will deliver a talk on Dutch design, and lead a tour inside and outside of the buildings. Mr. Pickell has been involved in historic preservation and restoration projects in Hunterdon and Mercer counties. He heads up the Flemington firm of Pickell Architecture, lauded for its work in adaptive reuse projects.

This lecture is held inside the historic Wade-Wyckoff Barn located at the Bouman-Stickney Farmstead in the Stanton section of Readington Township, GPS address: 114 Dreahook Road Lebanon NJ 08833. There is a $5.00 suggested donation, and reservations are highly recommended. For more information please call 908-236-2327 or visit the Dutch Architecture rsvp link at www.readingtonmuseums.org.

The Readington Museums received an operating support re-grant from the Hunterdon County Cultural & Heritage Commission, with funds from the New Jersey Historical Commission, a division of the Department of State.

In 1741 Dutch homesteader Thomas Bouman erected this building on property now known as the Bouman-Stickney Farmstead. But just how typical is the dwelling of Dutch architectural design?

Why is the house built of stone and not the traditional brick? How is the Dutch barn different from an English barn?

Find out as architectural historian Christopher Pickell answers these questions and leads a tour in and around the buildings of the farmstead.
